
Sivapuranam Lyrics In English Pd

3. Guru of Kokazhi (line 3) – refers to the prime deity of Shiva in the temple. The root meaning of ‘Guru’ is dispeller of darkness. ‘Guru, God and the Self’ are the same – ‘Ramana Maharishi’

4. Shiva S.S.Y: Intro, P.vii

The Dravidian or South Indian branch of Hinduism is theistic. To the majority of followers the Supreme being who is both god and godhead is called Shiva. Here there is a possible source of confusion because Shiva, the destroyer is also one of the Hindu Trinity or three principles which govern the manifested world.

Brahma – The creator or manifesting principle (not to be confused with Brahman, the Absolute of Vedanta). Vishnu, the preserver or sustaining principle and Shiva, the destroyer or the dissolving principle. But they relate to the manifested world only and are of a much lower order than Shiva, the Supreme Lord of all. To avoid confusion the alternative name Rudra is employed to designate the third principle.

5. Agamas (line 4) S.S.Y (glossary).

While all Hindus accept the Vedas as the revealed word, the Saiva Hindus state that the primary authority consists of the ‘Vedas’ and ‘Agamas’. The Vedas are said to be ‘general’ and to express basic metaphysical principles, while the Agamas are described as being ‘special’ since they are concerned with all the practical details of worship and the various means prescribed for attaining liberation. Each school of Hinduism has its own Agamas; thus there are Saiva Agamas (Sivagamas, Vaishnava Agamas etc.)

6. Long live the One that manifests the many (line 5) S.S.Y (intro.)

The charges of polytheism, idolatry, crude superstition and so on have often been leveled against Hinduism. But these mostly arise from misunderstanding. Hinduism, when it has a theistic form, is essentially
